NO NEWS FROM SAMOA.

Reported Sinking of the Nipsic Not Confirmed.

Blaine Has Received No Advice From Samoa.

Excitement Caused by the Rumor of a Battle.

Secretary Tracy Believes the Story to be Untrue.

The Story Discredited

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The story published here this afternoon that the United States man of war Nipsic was sunk in Samoan waters during a fight with the German corvette Olga, finds no believers here yet, nor can any confirmation worthy of credit be obtained. In consequence of the alleged encounter, however, the excitement here is tremendous. Even the ravenous horde of patriots who hold office pause to inquire to what would such a battle lead. Mr Blaine stated last night that he did not believe the report. Republicans Hitt and Morgan are disinclined to accept the German dispatch as true.

Mullin's Letter Not Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The following is part of the last letter from Captain Mullin, of the United States ship Nipsic, received by his brother in this city. The letter is dated Apia, January 28, 1889:

Here and in Samoa have we war times and excitement. Germany has declared war against Mataafa and martial law here and in Samoa. I have protested against this martial law business and think it has had a beneficial effect. They in their proclamation said that in case the citizens of Apia did not give in all of their arms, ammunition, etc., they would be deported or imprisoned. I held in writing, Captain Fritze of the Olga, that in the whole jurisprudence of my country there was no such punishment. They had the proclamation printed on January 23rd and ready to publish, but my protest had the effect of stopping this. This proclamation spoke of offences and penalties, death, deportation, shooting, hard labor, imprisonment, etc.

They do not hold Apia, nor have they invaded Samoa. Hence under English and American law are not proclaim martial law. But they say German law is different. Things are exciting here. They are at war with Mataafa, but all their preparations are directed against foreigners. They carry on a high game here and our government has but one vessel while they have three good ships. Finally, by way of an island that we will have more ships here. God only knows how this affair will end.

Samoans do not want Germany to annex their islands but have long ago asked both England and the United States to take them. I am kept busy from morning to night and have been since the seventh of December when the Adams left for California. My mail by this steamer will be the heaviest I have yet had as I may several reports to the Secretary are quite lengthy and full and giving every item that has occurred.

A little paper published here, the Samoan Times, was suppressed by the Germans in January. On January 8th the German consulate and German consul's house were burned. The loss was $100,000. It was the greatest fire ever in Apia. I sent out men to render aid, and I got thanked in a public proclamation a copy of which I send you. I think, and certainly hope, all my actions in this Samoan business will be approved by the government, for the state of Samoan affairs was never in such a condition and I am here alone just at the top and in the midst of it all, and of course the responsibility is great. I hear Germany intends sending out troops. About January 1 I sent Lieutenant Hawley to Auckland to telegraph to the Secretary, and he will be back on February 2d. The German governor at Auckland chartered a small English steamer the other day and sent her here with important German dispatches but what these dispatches were no one but the Germans know.

Anti-European Riots.

PARIS, March 9.—The steamship Belgic brings details of recent anti-European riots at Chin Kiang. The trouble began with a street row in which a Chinaman was knocked down by a policeman. A mob gathered and destroyed the police station and then made for the British consulate in pursuit of the police inspector who took refuge there and has not been seen since. On the way they fired the houses. Chinese troops were sent to disperse the mob but the soldiers either fled or fraternized with the rioters. The consul's wife fled here from with her children from the back door of the consulate, while the mob aided by the soldiers, sacked and burned everything. The missionaries' houses and chapel nearly shared the same fate, while the British consul was twice in imminent danger of death. The American consulate was looted and more houses were burned. The residents took refuge on the hulks and the mob tried to follow but the connecting bridges were cut. The viceroy telegraphed the British consul that he was sending two thousand soldiers to restore order.

The riot broke out again on Wednesday afternoon. When General Kennedy reached Chin Kiang he had the American flag raised at the United States consulate. The British ship Mutine arrived on Thursday and fired a salute to the British flag. Within five minutes after the firing of the first gun the Chinese in the settlement had fled in all directions. The United States ship Omaha has been recalled from Corea and has gone to Chin Kiang. The North China Daily News says: The chief lesson learned from this outbreak is that it will not do to believe that foreigners are in absolute safety at any of the treaty ports. Such incidents as happened at Chin Kiang may occur at any moment at any of the ports and every port should be within easy reach of a man of war. The Chinese government will have to pay full compensation for damage done.

Gossip.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—A prominent official of the navy department said to day that the fact that the department had not been officially advised of the blowing up of the Nipsic was regarded as sufficient evidence that no such thing had happened. They have not telegraphed to the British consul for the reason that it is assumed that he neglected his duty as it is alleged to inform his government of an event of such importance. In answer to a suggestion that the Germans would control every avenue by which

WEEK'S REVIEW.

Some Important Sales of Business Property Reported.

Strong Undertone the Marked Feature of the Market.

Large Block to be Built on North Tejon Street.

Work to Begin on the Third Story of the Red Elk.

A month ago of the days of the past week were very quiet and as a consequence there was a most decided movement in real estate. All of the dealers report a good business and some of them did a very large business. The principal feature of the week has been the sale of a number of business properties on North Tejon street. At least two very large sales are reported. These sales confirm the GAZETTE's statement of two weeks ago that there is a tendency to secure business property by men of wealth while it can be had at a reasonable figure. Of outside property there is little to be sold. There were the usual sales of vacant lots and no particular section seems to be booming. There is a great deal of inquiry in regard to properties towards the west of the city and the impression prevails that there is money in owning property in that direction, as the growth there is continuous and steady. The same strong undertone that has been the leading feature of the market all winter still prevails.

In the building world there has been a slight movement and although none of the large buildings that are to be erected during the coming season have been contracted for, yet the deadlock that has prevailed for two weeks has been broken. More carpenters are at work than last week and a much more cheerful spirit prevails among the builders.

NOTES.

W. A. Diebold is building a $1,800 house for Dr. J. F. Hewitt, on Institute Heights.

S. E. Salmons is building a $600 addition to Dr. B. P. Anderson's residence on Cascade avenue.

Mr. Dennis Shanahan is building a $1200 cottage in Gostich's addition. Mr. S. E. Salmons has the contract.

F. E. Rowe's real estate agency reports having done a business amounting to $90,000 during the past week.

Frank White reports considerable inquiry and quite a number of sales in the North Pueblo Heights which he is advertising just now.

There is a favorable inquiry for property in Colorado City and some sales are being made. The outlook for the little city was never better.

Spivey & Tuckerman have taken the contract for an addition to Conductor C. H. Gunn's house on the corner of Corona and Yampa streets.

An error in last week's building notes was the statement that Mr F. E. Robinson's new house cost up to about $2000. It should have read $20,000.

Mr. John Potter reports having done a splendid real estate business during the month of February. His sales aggregated over $45,000 for that month.

The fronts have been placed in the new Barton block stores. One of these is to be occupied as a grocery store and the other two as comfortable homes.

Dr. Strickler has fully determined to put the third story on the Red Elk hotel and the work has been let to Mr. W. R. Roby. Building will be begun immediately.

Mr. D. T. Blandford of Fairbanks, has purchased of Sprague & Heminway one of the cottages in the row of buildings known as Santa Fe Grove. The price is not given.

The Totman Patent House company have taken the contract to build a two story house for Mrs Pendleton, to be placed on North Cascade avenue. The company is now filling contracts for 16 different buildings.

It is stated that the new building of the D. T. & Ft W will probably be placed on Moreno avenue, and be used in conjunction with the Midland. The place mentioned would make a fine site for a depot.

Midwood Bros., who have the contract for the stone work of the Otis and Lent houses at Austin's Bluff, have thirty car loads of stone on the track for the work. They will keep thirty masons employed at the work.

A. L. Lawton reports having had a good week's business in the sale of West Colorado Springs property. He sold four lots on which two houses are to be built and four more on which five houses are to be built.

S. E. Salmons has taken the contract to build the five store rooms for A. F. Carpenter, on Kiowa street next to the El Paso club. The contract price is $1,000. They are to have plate glass fronts and will be very desirable.

The brick work on the new Robinson block is nearly completed and shows that the building will have quite an imposing appearance. It is probable that all three stores will be occupied as commission houses. The upper floor will be fitted up either for offices or furnished rooms.

The Colorado Springs Building company is just completing the $2,000 addition to the residence of Dr. F. A. Hale on North Tejon street and also the new store building for E. F. McClosky on the corner of Kiowa and Oak streets. The company has just taken a contract for a REAL ESTATE!

NEW MARKET!
Don't Go Three Miles Out in the Country for Lots, when you can get them for the Same Money in PARRISH'S ADDITION!
Only 3 Blocks from Cascade Avenue!
Only 3 Blocks from The Antlers Hotel!
Only 4½ Blocks from Post Office!
THE STREETS IN PARRISH'S ADDITION
Are 100 to 140 feet in width. THE ALLEYS are all 20 feet wide. There are no 60 or 80 feet streets and narrow, 10-feet alleys, such as are found in other lowly advertised "Additions," with high sounding titles, where you pay high prices for lots, without duly considering that you are throwing away your money.
In the Alley Behind Every Lot in Parrish's Addition
There is a 3-inch Water Pipe, connected at Chestnut street with a 16-inch main: the Largest in the City's System. THE MAIN CITY DITCH, taking pure, clear water from the Fountain, runs just back of PARRISH'S ADDITION, and within a stone's throw of it.
YOU ARE SURE TO GET WATER
(Both from Pipes and Ditch) in PARRISH'S ADDITION if there is any water in the Fountain, even if other parts of the city are suffering from scarcity of the precious fluid.
REMEMBER THE FOREGOING, and then, when I tell you I will sell you a First-Class
LOT IN PARRISH'S ADDITION FOR $350
To $1,000 a full size lot, 50 by 190 feet, do not hesitate a moment about buying. You can buy two lots on a corner, and erect pretty little cottages across them, giving each cottage a neat, pretty little yard, and readily rent them, owing to the location, etc.
To Pay You 25 to 35 Per Cent. Per Annum on the Entire Investment.
WHERE CAN YOU DO THIS ELSEWHERE?
THE STREET CAR LINE RUNS THROUGH PARRISH'S ADDITION, from East to West, and will doubtless soon be extended to the North, past the "Mesa Road," up to THE ROCK ISLAND SHOPS. Lots are sold on Terms to Suit Buyers if possible.
I AM ALSO SELLING
LOTS IN CALVERT HEIGHTS!
On Easy Terms, and at from $100 to $100. They bear very the same relation to
COLORADO CITY,
As do Parrish's Addition Lots to Colorado Springs, and
I CAN RECOMMEND THEM AS AN INVESTMENT!
SURE TO PAY A BIG PROFIT
DURING THE COMING YEAR.
CALVERT HEIGHTS!
Is surrounded by growing and progressive enterprises. THE MIDLAND SHOPS lie at its Northeast corner. Colorado City proper is North and Northeast of it. Bott's Additions join it on the North and Northwest. Colorado Springs itself is in full view, only two miles to the Southeast, and last though not least important,
The Great Glass Manufacturing Works
Are to be erected (at once) just south of CALVERT HEIGHTS. I have arranged to have every lot supplied with PURE WATER IN PIPES.
THE LOCATION IS SUPERB!
THE SURROUNDING VIEWS ARE MAGNIFICENT!
Last year I recommended you to buy lots in Parrish's Addition, and they have paid a better Profit than any other lots on the market. This year I urge you to add to Your Investment as Many Lots in Calvert Heights as you can afford to buy, with the result that, before the year is out, you will again be glad that you have taken my advice.
CALL EARLY! BUY SOON!
There are not very many lots altogether, and those who apply late may find them all gone, and will have to Pay an Advance.

JOB WORK

The death of Representative Towns of Illinois creates a vacancy in congress which will not easily be filled. His death is a loss not only to the democratic party, of which he was a distinguished member, but to the people of the country without regard to party.

There now seems to be some prospect that the schemes called upon to caucus by the democratic members of the New Jersey legislature to repeal the local option law will fail. The "democrats were united on it in caucus but some of them are afraid to cast their votes in that way in the open legislature.

Mr. Herbert Welsh, the well known secretary of the Indian Rights association recently wrote a letter to the Philadelphia Press stating the reasons which have induced his association to ask the president to retain in office the Hon. John J. Oberly commissioner of Indian affairs. The letter is a strong argument in Mr. Oberly's behalf. The present commissioner is an honest, capable and efficient officer. During the past four years, part of which time he has served as superintendent of Indian schools, he has acquired a knowledge of Indian affairs which should not be lost to the government. It would be difficult to find a man in either party who could bring to the office the fitness for its duties possessed by the present incumbent. It is true that Mr. Oberly is a democrat and very decided in his political opinions, but his service in the civil service commission has proved him to be an honest and sincere civil service reformer. General Harrison has said, "Only the interests of the public service should govern in removals from office." The retention of Mr. Oberly will be in accordance with the spirit and letter of this declaration, and would be generally endorsed by all who have the interest of our public service and the Indian cause at heart.

Now installed in his high office, his cabinet appointed and at work, General Harrison turns about to face the flood of office seekers pouring in a strong and endless flood through the White House gates. It is the same thing that greets each succeeding president except perhaps that the throng this year is a little larger and a little more eager to divide the spoils. The candidate for country postmaster is there side by side with the candidate for the army post of chief of a bureau. Those who do not want office for themselves want it for their friends. Each one insists that the rascals must be turned out. They are pleased to forget that turning these so called base traitors means the breaking of the parties pledge and the president's word of honor. Some of these same office seekers assisted in building the Chicago platform. They were among those who nominated Harrison and placed him on that platform. Their voices were heard on the stumps throughout the land asking for the votes of the people for their candidate, and pointing to the platform as a promise of what the party would do if returned to power. Election over and the party successful these same men are just as eager to break the pledges as they were to make them. If these people will stop a moment to think of what General Harrison has said about [illegible] in his letter of acceptance of the nomination and later in his inaugural address they will realize how useless is the rush for office they are making. There is nothing dishonorable about seeking office but the party pledges to fully and faithfully enforce the civil service set must be redeemed. The great Harrison is a thorough [illegible] and will [illegible] upon to fill those offices not covered by the civil service laws with men in political sympathy with the administration, but he must have time to consider these changes and in the meantime every sense of justice to him and the people whose servant he is, is outraged by his time being consumed and his strength exhausted by the importunities of office seekers. Let those who assisted in the grand victory for republican principles last November assist now in making the administration a success. Let republicans show that they are republicans for the sake of principle, not for spoils.

The following are some of the comments on the inaugural address published by the Chicago Times:

Upon the whole the message is a good one. It is especially accordant because it is intensely characteristic of the author, honest and cool-blooded man who wrote it—a man of clear commercial brain [illegible]

It is exceedingly well composed and admirable in its terse and pithy phrases and happily turned periods. What the country will [illegible] however, is its sound and large-hearted sense, plain talk and good feeling. (Louisville Commercial, rep.)

[illegible] President Harrison's inaugural is a straightforward, business like and manly document. Mentally, by American it [illegible] a man who gives the keynote of the administration in the States in favor of home [illegible] and commercial development regardless of geography or sectional [illegible] (St. Paul Press, rep.)

All in all the address is not a bad piece of [illegible] exhibit in the person of Harrison [illegible] the same happy faculty so prominent in the speeches of Harrison candidate of any [illegible] (Louisville Courier-Journal, dem.)

[illegible] Washington [illegible] strikes us as cold, [illegible] entirely also [illegible] Indeed [illegible] who has [illegible] the rights of the [illegible] to [illegible] as a personal [illegible] without affording any expression of their effect upon them. [illegible] in this address in General Harrison's favor, not against him, and we think that [illegible] will be as quick as enthusiastic republicans to reciprocate that feeling. (New York Sun, rep.)

[illegible]

St. Louis, March 9.—The general managers of the Trans-Missouri Railway association completed their labors tonight. The general committee unanimously agreed upon a plan of organization which consists of three divisions to be called respectively Northwestern, Southwestern and Trans Missouri divisions and one additional passenger association, the latter to cover the territory west of the Missouri river not now included in the western states passenger association. Each sub division association will make rates through over all lines on the business it originates. A meeting has been called to be held in Chicago next Wednesday of the general managers of all lines parties to the inter state agreement to consider and take final action on the committee report.

[illegible]

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The work of arranging the senate committees or [illegible] the majority members of the were completed this afternoon by the republican caucus committee. Their report will be ready to the caucus [illegible] 10 o'clock next Monday. It is understood that in filling the vacant chairmanships precedent has been followed. It is believed that Senator Mitchell of Oregon will be chairman of the committee on fish. The democrats are said to be satisfied with the arrangement and division of the membership but they evidently find it more difficult to place their men as they have not yet completed the work. They will not hold their caucus until after the republican caucus and probably not before Tuesday.

At the White House.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—There were not so many people at the White house this morning but the politicians turned out in full force and a crowd assembled in the president's office, occupying his attention from 9 30 to 12 30 when the president excused himself for the purpose of consulting with the cabinet on matters requiring prompt attention.

[illegible] in form, and [illegible] were labeled with the [illegible] tubes, each [illegible] from a central hub. Those in the [illegible] of the hemisphere pointed directly to [illegible], while those in its front portion were placed forward at a right angle, and those in the rear portion backward at the same angle. One tube at the end of the bomb was pointing directly backward, forward the motive power.

Each of these tubes could exert a force sufficient to move an ordinary train of [illegible] cars [illegible] power could be exerted [illegible] the difference between the opening of a train at one end of the [illegible] and its arrival at the other would not be appreciable. The difference in consciousness between a train moving at the rate of a mile in two minutes, or even one minute, and another train which moves a mile in half [illegible] could easily be imagined.

If these bombs whose tubes which which direct their powers downward or laterally upon the earth were capable of instantaneously propelling every portion of solid ground or rock to a distance of two or three hundred yards, while the particles of objects on the surface of the earth were instantaneously removed to a far greater distance. The tube which propelled the bomb was of a force graduated according to circumstances, and it would carry a bomb to as great a distance as accurate observation for purposes of aim could be made. Its force was brought into action while in the [illegible] by an [illegible] of electricity, while the same effect was produced in the other tubes by the close confined steel head against the object aimed at.

The method of aiming was as novel as the high itself. In this process nothing depended on the eyesight of the gunner; the personal equation was entirely eliminated. The gun was so mounted that its direction was accurately indicated by graduated scales, there was an instrument which was acted upon by the dip [illegible] and which showed at any moment the position of the gun with reference to the plane of the earth's surface.

Before the discharge of the cannon an observation was taken by one of the scientific men which accurately determined the angle at which the object to be aimed at, and reference to a carefully prepared mathematical table showed to what position the graduated scales the gun should be set. And then we knew that the course of the cannon was in the position that was when the observation was taken a balloon was touched and the gun was instantaneously placed on the position that. The exactness with which the propelling force for the bomb could be determined was an important factor in this method of aiming.

A [illegible] three of the spring armored cross and two "crabs" were completed. The syndicate felt itself ready to begin operations. It was indeed time. The seas had been covered with American and foreign merchantmen hastening homeward, or to friendly ports, before the actual commencement of hostilities. But all had not been fortunate enough to reach safety within the limits of time allowed, and several American merchant vessels had been already captured by the British cruisers.

The agents of the syndicate well understood that if a war was to be carried on as they desired, they must strike the first blow. Comparatively speaking, very short time had elapsed since the [illegible] of war, and the opportunity of the initiative was still open.

It was decided to take this initiative that, in the early hours of a dark morning, two of the syndicate's armored vessels each accompanied by a crab should leave the New York land port, and have for the point on the Canadian shore at which it had been decided to open the campaign.

they bore an iron net, three or four hundred feet long and thirty feet deep, composed of pointed steel rods. Along the upper edge of this net was a series of [illegible] floats which were so proportioned that they were equal to the weight of the net a few feet below the surface of the water, from which position they held the net suspended vertically.

This net, which was intended to protect the repeller against the approach of submarine torpedoes which might be directed from the [illegible], was anchored at each end, two very small floats indicating its position. The crabs then falling astern, Repeller No. 1 lay to, while the sunken net between her and the shore, and prepared to project the first torpedoes ever used in warfare.

The great gun in the bow of the vessel was loaded with one of the largest and most powerful motor bombs, and the spot to be aimed at was selected. This was a point in the [illegible] just [illegible] to the mouth of the harbor, and nearly a mile from the land on either side. The distance of this point from the vessel being calculated, the cannon was adjusted at the angle called for by the scale of distances and levels, and the instrument indicating rise, fall and direction was then put in connection with the [illegible].

Now the director-in-chief stepped forward to the button, by pressing which the power of the motor was developed. The chief of the signaling corps then turned into the exact point upon the scale, which would be indicated when the gun was in its proper position, and the wires were then put upon its bearings so as to approximate as nearly as possible this direction.

The bow of the vessel now rose upon the swell of the sea, and the instant that the index upon the scale reached the desired point, the director-in-chief touched the button.

There was no report, no smoke, no visible sign that the motor had left the cannon, but at that moment there appeared, to those who were on the lookout from a fort, about a mile away, a vast aperture in the waters of the bay which was variously described as from 100 yards to 500 yards in diameter. At that stage it [illegible] the neighboring [illegible] and clouds far up the shores of the bay, and [illegible] there was felt a sharp shock as if the underlying rocks had been struck by a gigantic trip hammer.

At the same instant the sky above the spot where the motor had descended was darkened by a wide spreading cloud. This was formed of that portion of the water of the bay which had been instantaneous raised to the height of about a thousand feet. The [illegible] appearance of this cloud was even more terrible than the yawning chasm in the waters of the bay, or the startling shock, but it did not remain long in view. It had no sooner reached its highest elevation than it began to descend. There was a strong sea breeze blowing, and in its descent this vast [illegible] of water was impelled toward the fort.

It came down, not as rain, but as the waters of a vast cataract, as though a mountain lake, by an earthquake shock, had been precipitated in a body upon a valley. Only one edge of it reached the land, and here the nothing flood tore away earth, trees and rocks, leaving behind it great chasms and gullies as it descended to the sea.

The bay itself, into which this vast body of the water fell, became a scene of surging magic. The towering walls of water which had stood up all around the suddenly created aperture hurled themselves back into the abyss and down into the great chasm at the bottom of the bay, which it had been made when the motor sent its shock along the great rock bed. Down upon and into this rose [illegible] and terrible [illegible] and had supposed that she would be afraid to make her peculiar attack upon one of the [illegible] while doing so she [illegible] expose herself to the danger of being run down by the other. But the presence of two of these [illegible] of the action entirely changed the situation.

But the commanders of the British ships were brave men. They had expected to run down a strangely armored American craft, and run her down they would, if they could. They put on more steam and went ahead at greater speed. In such a furious onslaught the crabs might not dare to attack them.

But they did not understand the nature nor the powers of these [illegible]. In less than twenty minutes Crab A had held hold of one of the men-of-war, and Crab B of the other. The rudders of both were shattered and torn away, and while the blades of one propeller were [illegible] to pieces, the other, with nearly half its shaft, was drawn out and dropped into the ocean. Helpless by the two men-of-war rose and fell upon the waves.

In obedience to orders from the repeller, each crab took hold of one of the disabled vessels and towed it near the mouth of the harbor, where it was left.

The city was now in a state of feverish excitement, which was intensified by the fact that a majority of the people did not understand what had happened, while those to whom this had been made plain could not comprehend why such a thing should have been allowed to happen. Three of her majesty's ships of war, equipped and ready for action, had sailed out of the harbor, and an apparently insignificant enemy, without firing a gun, had put them into such a condition that they were utterly unfit for action and must be towed into a dry dock. Those who [illegible] the navy, explain this.

The anxiety, the excitement, the nervous desire to know what had happened, and what might be expected next, spread throughout the city and of the Dominion reached by telegraph.

The military authorities in charge of the defenses of the city were as much disturbed and amazed by what had happened as any civilian could possibly be, but they had no fears for the safety of the place, for the enemy's [illegible] could not possibly enter, nor even approach the harbor. The fortifications on the heights mounted guns much heavier than those on the men-of-war, and shots from these fired from an elevation might sink even those "under water devils." But, more than on the forts, they relied upon their admirable system of torpedoes and submarine batteries. With these in position and ready for action, as they now were it was impossible for an enemy's [illegible], floating on the water, or under it, to enter the harbor without certain destruction.

Bulletins to this effect were posted in the city, and somewhat allayed the popular anxiety, although many people who were fearful of what might happen next, left by the evening trains for the interior. That night the news of this extraordinary affair was cabled to Europe, and then back to the United States, and all over the world. In many quarters the account was disbelieved, and in no quarter was it thoroughly understood, for it must be borne in mind that the methods of operation employed by the crabs were not evident even to those on board the [illegible] vessels.

GEORGE KENNAN.

Stepniak Describes His Meeting with the Magazinist.

The Curious History of a Siberian Watch-Tower.

An American's Experience in the Land of Exile.

(Copyrighted 1889, by the Author.)
LONDON, Feb. 25, 1889.

It was from Russian newspapers that I first learned of Mr. Kennan's Siberian expedition. All the St. Petersburg papers showed a great interest in the work of the two distinguished Americans sent by a colossal New York publishing house to explore, regardless of expense, that land of exile, and to study its inhabitants. I was likewise interested in the undertaking, though, to tell the truth, I did not expect anything of particular importance would come from the enterprise. It is so difficult in Russia to get at the truth, which those in power are bent upon concealing, and foreigners are so easily deceived. Several times this has been so, examples can pro... I thought, only too well. But knowing that a very clever artist, Mr. George Frost, was one of the party, I expected something valuable, but in the pictorial and geographical line rather than in the political field.

It was in such a disposition of mind that in the early spring of 1888, I got from a London friend of mine a note telling me that Mr. Kennan was in town and had some message for Prince Kropotkine and myself from our Siberian friends.

A message from friends pining in Siberian bulks is something within a ... of a message from beyond the grave. It is easy to realize with what impatience we awaited the man who had personally seen in body and flesh these lost friends of ours, who had spoken to them, and could tell us all particulars about them.

The meeting took place one of the next evenings at my house. Peter Kropotkine came early, and was not the least impatient of the few friends who were assembled. His brother, and my friend, Alexander Kropotkine, a ... and peaceful scholar, quite unlike one of being the brother of Peter, was still alive at that time, enjoying his tenth year of exile in T... Mr. Kennan had seen him on ... during this town, and was certain to bring us the latest news about him.

Punctually at the hour fixed upon, Mr. Kennan arrived. I will not describe his features, now familiar enough to the American reading public. His rather slim figure and meagre ... face, with lively eyes and well shaped forehead, struck me at first sight as an embodiment of a genuine typical representative of what is called the intellectual type of humankind.

The few words of introduction having been hastily exchanged, I took possession of our guest, whom I had seated up on a sofa-chair and asked him without further preliminaries to tell his story. Mr. Kennan began giving us all the news he had about our people. From his very first words it was clear to me that his acquaintance with our Siberian friends was much closer than his short stay at various places seem to warrant. He spoke of matters which referred to their inner life, of their relative hopefulness or despondency, their plans, prospects, etc., as only an intimate acquaintance can speak. One bit of his information positively astounded me. Referring to one batch of exiles, he told us that the seal of great secrecy that such and such of them were planning an escape the coming spring. Three years have elapsed since and the projected escape had not been revealed as I learned afterwards. So there is no harm mentioning the matter now. But on hearing Mr. Kennan tell us about the affair at that time, I could not help wondering how those concerned, whose liberty and life were at stake, could have brought themselves to mention such a thing to a foreigner, who was paying them but a short visit. This implied a degree of confidence and intimacy which went far beyond my expectation.

F... the conversation glided to the general impressions of the country, the people, the administration. As Kropotkine had spent five of his best years as an explorer and official aide de camp of the governor of Eastern Siberia, he had exceptional opportunity of knowing that country as it was in the years of 1862-67. Accordingly we were entertained by a very curious parallel between the Siberia of to-day and that of twenty-five years ago. In one point, however, the picture proved to be strikingly similar, in the system and character of the administration.

Thus Kropotkine told us the amusing story of the construction of a watch tower in the town of Chita an affair of a few months' work which, nevertheless, seemed to have less chance of being ever brought to completion than the Panama canal. The fact is that no expenditure, however trifling, can be made without the permission of the central government. The estimates of the new watch tower had accordingly to be sent over from Chita to St. Petersburg for the approbation of the minister of the interior. Of course it was a matter of mere formality, the minister signs such things without so much as reading them. But with the long journey backward and forward, and the procrastination common to all bureaucratic proceedings, three watch towers estimates returned to Chita with ... years or so after they had been drawn up and dispatched.

Now the whole of Siberia and its principal towns in particular, being in a state of very rapid commercial and industrial growth, it always happened that in the space of these two years prices had risen. The sum allowed for the construction of the watch tower was no longer sufficient when awarded. So a new estimate had to be made in accordance with the new conditions of the building trade. It was again sent to St. Petersburg, approved, returned to Chita in another two years to prove as valueless as the former ones. The officials of St. Petersburg as well as those of Chita being perfectly indifferent to the matter, the affair of that luckless watch tower dragged for about a score of years, bidding fair to go on dragging until doomsday.

Mr. Kennan, who knew Chita very well, told us that he had heard of a certain watch-tower which had been in a state of ... for some end of years but had finally been completed a short time before his arrival. The miracle occurred, Mr. Kennan was informed, because the present governor got sick of the matter and ordered, in perfect disregard of the law, that an estimate should be made for what was much higher than justified by the current prices, and thus the structure was at last built. We concluded that this might very well be the same watch-tower of which Kropotkine spoke. Anyhow the case is a conclusive proof of the old-fashioned ways and traditions of Russian bureaucracy.

Mr. Kennan went on telling us many other stories of similar nature, referring to bureaucratic procrastination, bribery, peculation, extortion, and other peculiarities of the Russian administration. His illustrations, collected on the spot, and bearing the stamp of perfect authenticity, delighted us exceedingly. They were as amusing as characteristic, testifying to the traveller, who knew how to separate the kernel from the husk, the essential from the casual and personal.

In his Century articles Mr. Kennan has dealt chiefly with our exile system. He has said hardly anything in his own name at all events, on the ... question of the general mismanagement of the country. Certainly he will do it some day, either in the next Century article or in his forthcoming volume. And I can vouch beforehand that the disclosures he will make on that point will be fully backed by ... no less striking if not an dramatic ... referring to the impulsive and ... exiled nihilists. To diplomatists and statesmen trying to understand the inner working of the various northern empire, this part of Mr. Kennan's investigations will certainly be of the highest ... He had obtained what is so very rare in the ... of foreigners, an insight into the real ... of Russian institutions and official corruption, which result from the whole system, quite independently of the good or bad intentions and disposition of the actual representatives of that system.

In listening to Mr. Kennan's lively talk, to his racy ... and ... observations, I quite forgot that we were speaking with a foreigner. I must add that our conversation was carried on in the Russian language which is perfectly familiar to Mr. Kennan, and which made the illusion all the more complete.

Next day, we went to see Mr. and Mrs. Kennan at their apartments near Charing C. There we were introduced to Mr. Frost, who obligingly showed us his rich collection of photographs and admirable drawings. We spent the whole evening together, and did not notice how quickly the time for leaving arrived. It was our second and, for a season, our last meeting—for Mr. Kennan had to start on the morrow on another short journey to St. Petersburg and the interior of European Russia. But these short hours of acquaintance were sufficient to make it clear to me how Mr. Kennan must have succeeded in quickly winning the full confidence of our Siberian friends, and of all the Russians in general with whom he happened to come into contact. He possesses just what pleases our people most: the charm of sincerity and earnestness an impressionable nature, easily roused to human sympathy, and all this combined with a perfect, fully developed artistic faculty and ... of observation, which characterizes I have met with only among my American acquaintances.

An Englishman or German or Frenchman, endowed with Mr. Kennan's qualities, would have certainly accomplished a great deal in an enterprise like his. But I doubt whether they would have done so much. With his unconventional, unceremonious manners, reminding one of a Russian student, Mr. Kennan must have made all Russians, especially those belonging to the educated classes, feel quite at home with him from the very first moment.

The political exiles disseminated in various towns of Siberia being in constant correspondence and very well acquainted with each other—the very best introduction from one batch of exiles to another naturally accompanied and often preceded Mr. Kennan in his journey. Thus he was enabled notwithstanding his short stay in each town, to get very intimately acquainted with our people and obtain access to disclosures and confidences which another man would perhaps never have obtained.

Before starting on his Siberian journey, Mr. Kennan was inclined to think rather favorably of the treatment of prisoners in Russia. His earlier Russian trip had brought him into contact with some officials of the government, who gave him the ... smiling picture of Russian prison and exile life as they wished to have it ... suspect their veracity and soundness of information, Mr. Kennan repeated what he heard from them in his American articles and lectures on Russia. This secured him a particularly favorable reception in the St. Petersburg official circles. The Russian government very indignant when its sins are revealed has no objection to be whitewashed before the American public as it has been whitewashed by Dr. Landsdale before the English public.

But Mr. Kennan was not satisfied with simply putting down in his journal what the officials were kind enough to show or suggest to him. Knowing the Russian language very well, he was able to inquire and investigate independently. The result was as surprising to himself as it was sure to be unpalatable to the Russian government when made public. It was perfectly certain that after him no foreign traveller, likely to preserve anything like independence of judgment, would be allowed to approach within gunshot a political prisoner. From this fact Mr. Kennan's work was looked forward to with additional importance. It was promised to be exhaustive and I was sure that it would be the only expose of that nature which would ever appear again.

Now Mr. Kennan was, as I have just said about to risk himself once more in the czar's dominions. He was already in bad odor with the police, thanks to his frequent intercourse with political exiles. He might be arrested. But this did not trouble me much. His great work was accomplished. His precious materials, diaries, notebooks, etc., were safely sent over to America and were therefore quite safe. If he happened to be arrested somewhere the police would simply escort him over the frontier a little earlier than he intended to go if left to himself.

I asked Mr. Kennan lestingly whether he had not some constitutional illness, which might take him away before he should be able to accomplish his work. Being tilted on that point I expressed my hope that he would not be drowned in crossing the ocean or killed by some railway accident, rather frequent in Russia, thanks to the ... "savings" of the engineers and superintendents.

But the last journey of Mr. Kennan proved to be as ... as the first.

About a year later, in November, 1887, the series of his articles began to appear in the Century. They were immediately prohibited in Russia and merciless ly cut out by the ... censors from the copies of the Century that ... through their hands. Yet these articles have been all translated and published ... in Russia, circulating widely in lithographic copies in the very teeth of the censorship.

What these articles, what a stir they have made in the new and old world I need not say here. Their literary and scientific merit have been fully appreciated by the press and the reading public of both hemispheres. I will merely add a few words upon the historical importance and political bearing of Mr. Kennan's work.

This is the heaviest blow which has been ever dealt the moral prestige of the Russian tsar. The overthrow of autocracy, which is stifling the whole Russian nation, can be wrought only by the Russian people themselves. But Russia is not an isolated country. She is connected in every way with civilized nations, being influenced by them intellectually and morally more by far than is generally supposed. The public opinion of the civilized world is therefore an agent of great magnitude to us. Every act likely to help in the right way has, therefore, its value. As to Mr Kennan's work, its importance can hardly be over-estimated. His charges are overwhelming, his testimony unimpeachable, his facts irrefutable. At the same time his literary abilities, the artistic merits of his collaborator, and the enormous publicity of the Century Magazine are such as secure him and his writings millions of readers. His influence upon public opinion both in America and in Europe is already thoroughly felt, and it will increase every year. He has rendered a good service indeed to the cause of Russian emancipation. Every Russian to whom the future of his country is dear, will be deeply thankful to Mr Kennan as a fellow-American in general who by their intelligent interest, rendered, ... while so vast an obligation as this one.

And furthermore a fellow-man of letters cannot help feeling proud and elated on seeing that a colleague having no other weapon but his pen has been able to accomplish such wonderful results.

"THE UNION SPY."

A Fine Production of the Play Given by Company A Last Night.

Those who attended the performance at the opera house last night to witness the play of the "Union Spy," or as it is sometimes known "The Spy of Shiloh" were most agreeably entertained. The members of Company A and a number of their lady friends have been at work upon the production for some time, and it was expected that a good performance would be the result, but almost everyone was unprepared for the fine performance given. A person who attends an amateur performance must, perforce, do so with a heart full of charity if he expects to enjoy himself, but very little sympathy was needed by the members of the cast last night.

The play was given without a hitch or bad break, although the action is very rapid. The drama deals in incidents connected with the late war and is filled with stirring scenes of camp life. Our [illegible]

[illegible]

The following [illegible]

[illegible]

The members of Company A can take considerable credit to themselves for the way in which the play was presented, and as there was a very good sized audience present they are somewhat better off for their effort.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 9.—The cabinet yesterday discussed the Lower California troubles and decided, if necessary, to declare martial law. Troops are being hurried forward to protect the frontier.

Sullivan on a Rampage.

NEW YORK, March 9.—It was reported up town about midnight that John L. Sullivan was again on a rampage and that he had engaged in a quarrel with Jerry Dunn in Mike Kelly's saloon at Thirty first street and Sixth avenue. John L. had previously quarrelled with another man, who was going to sue him. His friends managed to separate them and then the row began between John and Jerry. The latter drew a revolver and threatened to shoot the bruiser dead if he hit him.

An Angry Mob.

MILWAUKEE, March 9.—There was a wild scene on the market square this morning when the Chinamen Sam Yup Ja and Hah Ding were taken to jail from the municipal court where they were to have been examined on the charge of enticing little girls into their dens for immoral purposes. A crowd of one thousand men made nearly demonstrations and only a heavy body guard saved them from lynching. There were ten children in the court ready to testify against them, but the case was continued owing to the failure to secure an interpreter.

John Wanamaker's Work.

From Mr. Carson's Washington Dispatch to the Leda.

There has been a great deal of gossip in the newspapers lately about the relation of Mr. Wanamaker and General Harrison, and statements have been made from time to time that Mr. Wanamaker was [illegible] dation of Senator Quay as the chairman of the national committee. [illegible] Wanamaker was a shifting quantity. There has not been from the time Mr Wanamaker's name was presented by Mr Quay the slightest doubt as to his selection nor has General Harrison at any time even contemplated substituting anyone else for the Philadelphia merchant. No man knows better than General Harrison the character, extent and value of Mr Wanamaker's services in the campaign. He will go into the cabinet not as the representative of Mr Quay and upon his sole recommendation but upon the unanimous endorsement of the national committee and because Mr Wanamaker has developed business qualities and large
